Education Centers

2. There was an unidentified school with gardens on Stalina ulitsa almost in front of the intersection where the central telephone office was located. There was a radio school at the northeastern side of the beginning of Stalina ulitsa. [REDACTED]

Military Installations

50X1-HUM

3. The military artillery academy, (artilleriyskoye uchilishche) (point 41, page 6) trained artillery officers and also had a special school, (spets uchilishche). [REDACTED] students of the latter did not belong to the artillery corps. Entrance to the artillery academy and special school required the completion of a ten-year school. The rank of lieutenant was attained upon graduation. The student uniform consisted of a khaki color, closed, tight-fitting jacket with a belt and a pleat-like opening in the back with two buttons on each side; the front of the jacket had two rows of gold buttons and the jacket buttoned to 50X1-HUM the left; the black shoulderboards of the uniform had gold piping. The students wore high leather boots. [redacted] the students practiced firing only light antitank artillery because this was the only type of weapon seen [redacted]. The guns were hitched to unidentified trucks. The location of the firing range was unknown. [redacted]

The exact location of the military group was unknown. [redacted] it was near or possibly in the artillery academy. Occasionally [redacted] these cadets in the city where they acted as guard squads armed with pistols, culatin (sic), and submachine guns. They wore a khaki color shirt which buttoned to the neck and had a wide neckband. It was rumored they were being trained in new war tactics, engineering, and in radar techniques. 50X1-HUM

Industries

5. The main industrial installation in the city was the Frunze Machine Building Plant (point No. 3, page 6). Other industrial installations were: a hydraulic pump plant, (point 6, page 6); a chemical plant (point 40, page 6) which was under construction, although an undetermined number of buildings were in operation; a textile mill (point 29, page 6); and a sugar refinery (point 6, page 6). There were two large hotels on Lenina and Stalina ulitsy. There were two movies; one next to the hotel on Stalina ulitsa, and the other, on the Kharkov road facing Lenina Park.

Transportation and Traffic

6. Vehicular access to the city was by the main Kharkov highway (point 38, page 6). The railroad station (point 2, page 6) was in the northern sector of the city. The civil airfield was about 12 kilometers to the west in the village of Stepanovka (N 51-11, E 33-47). There were three autobus lines. The first departed from Red Square and went along Frunze, Gorkiy, and Privokzalnaya ulitsy (points 23, 17 and 15) to the railroad station; on the return route it went along the eastern side of the city to Stalina ulitsa and back to Red Square. The second crossed the bridge over the Psel River (point 37) and went along the Kharkov road to the chemical plant; the return route was the same. The third bus went along Stalina ulitsa to the artillery academy and returned on Kirova ulitsa (point 30b).
